Document Expert Jack Doyle Joins URI

Pottstown, PA — November, 2008 — Unlimited Restoration, Inc. has announced the appointment of document restoration expert Jack Doyle to oversee the company's Document Restoration Services Division. He will support recovery efforts nationwide and will be based at URI's Sterling, Virginia facility.

Mr. Doyle brings with him a broad range of experience having worked in the restoration industry for more than 23 years. He is internationally recognized for implementing and perfecting a process of freeze-drying as a means to preserve and recover valuable documents, rare books and media. According to Doyle, "freezing immediately stabilizes the damaged documents to prevent additional deterioration and the growth of mold and mildew. The drying process allows us to maintain document integrity, shape and form not possible using other drying methods."

The unprecedented restoration of over 30,000 photographic glass plate images for the Peterborough Centennial Museum and Archives (Peterborough, Ontario, Canada) is one notable example of Doyle's work. These priceless and irreplaceable images were literally underwater due to a catastrophic flood and were fully restored utilizing Doyle's expertise.

URI is one of the largest disaster recovery providers for the insurance, public and private industrial/commercial marketplace. Services include turn key, post-disaster cleaning, structural drying, mold remediation, and reconstruction.
